Minato gave the attacker an indignant look. He told Tomi-sensei that he was still a simpleminded child on the inside. Just like his owner. The two people and one dog went to the back of the park, entering the forest there. Fuu disappeared into the nighttime forest. I'm shooting a hundred arrows every day, and aiming for a total of ten-thousand arrows. All five of the arrows he had shot before had pierced the target. They couldn't stop recounting their childhood stories, like when they lost their shoes swimming in the river after school, or when they got scolded for sneaking into Seiya's family's hospital when it was closed and playing with the athletic tape. And what's more, that wasn't the only shot. Go ahead and take it.""No thank you. It was equivalent to the kamiza (higher position) so the household shrine and the national flag were enshrined there. This mission is nothing but a success. Even though it's spring, it's still cold in the mornings.""...Seiya, good morning."" ...Seiya, good morning."" ...Seiya, good morning." It wasn't that Minato didn't want to see Seiya. Even though there were those who would take the "Bernie" part of its name and name it "Bunny-chan" like a rabbit, there weren't a lot of people who would name it "Bear". It is said that tsurune was the sound made when the bowstring and tension returned to the original form of the string, was also considered tsurune. Along with his old and new comrades, he once more aims for winning the prefectural tournament. Facing the target, he lifted the bow and arrow with both hands. And?" Ryouhei said, completely on board. Today, I called it even though I don't have any. I have a replacement tube but it's quite a bother. What is it, what is it??"While Minato was thinking about how suspicious that was, Ryouhei's eyes shone with curiosity. "Ah, actually, this school has a kyudo club, but it has hardly been active recently. There was a wide paved road which could be reached by car, but this way was a shortcut, and on the way, there was a narrow path that one person could barely squeeze past. When other people said words that were taken as sarcasm, Ryouhei said them with a smile. He wondered if it was the same archer that he saw with his mother when he was little, pulling back the bow. The light was on in the building next to the front shrine. There was a built-in mailbox at the entrance of the traditional Japanese house, where a signboard hung with the words "Yata no Mori Kyudojo" on it. The man had been trying to retrieve the medicine in the back of the drawer, and pulled it out." Oh no, I did it again." He said he did it again, so does that mean he pulls open that drawer and cause stuff to fly out a lot?" Um, are you okay?" "Yeah. When he confirmed that the pouch with the dragonfly pattern was in his bag, he flew out beneath the darkening sky. He loved riding his bicycle. The wind was frosty, sweeping away the words that he was saddled with, cooling down that aching heat. He took the string with his right hand, and held the bow with his left. Seiya's naming sense may be in doubt, but a family who allowed him to give that name was also worthy of respect. Minato also greeted Bear, and Bear waggled his tail. Today's the seventy-ninth day.""What's your goal?" "Nothing in particular. We're going to do anything. Bear licked Minato's face. "It's usually my dad's job, but he was busy this morning, so I took his place." "Oh, are you walking Bear?" If someone only listened to that exchange, they might have gotten frightened. The yellow bird disappeared, and in its place, an old sign board reading "Yata Shrine" caught his attention. * Book name can't be empty. Minato looked up, and as if trying to test him, the trees swayed, making a rustling sound. It was the very moment when bow and archer met. Wondering whether he should try to call out, he suddenly heard a "Gyaah!" sound above his head, and his body spontaneously shivered."...Was that an owl? Chapters[] Prologue[] A young Minato visits a shrine with his mother, where he stumbles upon a kyudo competition. This caused Fuu to tremble with a jump. They were weak to heat, so this area, which had a high altitude and was relatively cool even in Japan, was perfect. He stance—like a column of smoke loosely rising up to the sky on a windless day—was textbook perfect. He pulled back half the length of the arrow and stopped briefly, then pulled back half the length of the arrow and stopped briefly. joining the kyudo club. Even though there shouldn't be any problem, his perturbed heart felt unsatisfied. When he passed under the tunnel of treetops, he could see the three-car train travelling slowly in the distance. He was familiar, and one of the objects that symbolized him as intelligent and calm. Account We've sent email to you successfully. It was an act of sensing that he had forgotten his towel, and because the reason that he must leave was approaching. A boy in casual clothes, seeming to be taking a walk in the neighborhood, stood next to Minato. That spot's already fine."Having been chided, Bear immediately stopped, and sat next to Minato. This is awesome!""Wait, you can't actually be Ryouhei!? The mysterious figure looked like he was in his twenties, and his shoulder-length hair was tied back. The man nocked an arrow to his bow, then looked to check for any problems with the string or the arrow. It was lighter than he had expected, and along with a pleasant weight, Fuu gripped his shoulder tightly. The innocent Bear, time, and the passions that they had devoted themselves into had healed the wounded Minato and others. Here's a thank-you gift. Um, could 'Fuu' be the name of that owl?""Yes, it's a good name, isn't it? He'd been talking about the bow since forever."Tomi-sensei smiled broadly."There are few junior highs with a kyudo club, so people with kyudo experience are valuable. It overlapped with his old memories. I want to compliment you on how honest you are, but just come and take a better look."The man was holding a can of coffee with a picture of a snowy mountain on it. When he finished drinking, he put the can aside and headed for the targets again. In Minato's eyes, that man was as elegant as an actor performing in a program that was a marvel... As his skin got chills, the arrow was breathed in by the target. It hit the target right in the center. "Bear" was the name of a dog. Minato and Fuu looked up at the ceiling, which the man noticed." Sorry, your eyes must be pretty irritated. If anything, he was the only person he could call his best friend, and he had known him the longest. These old eyes are not mistaken. A long, white scar was briefly exposed on his uncovered left flank. Because he didn't wipe himself up properly, water dripped from his bangs. After a while, he hit a long slope. Here it is."The man found a worn-out tube from among the scattered items, and held it out to Minato. repeated the entire process of shooting the arrows on hand and retrieving them, all over again. Still holding his can, Minato watched his beautiful movements. But he approached me without making a sound, so who the heck is he? The man wrapped the indigo-dyed hand towel he carried around his left arm, and held it up towards the trees. (1) A long time ago, it was injured and I took care of it, and so I gave it that name back then. An incognito order is a mission.""Mission!? And when he realized he fell for Seiya's bluff, Minato could only make the meager comeback of simply leaving that spot. Refusing other invitations from his classmates and girls, Minato returned home alone. Although he lived only with his father, he never felt very lonely or inconvenient because Seiya and his parents were kind. Kyudo tends to be thought of as an individual sport, but when everyone's breathing doesn't match perfectly, it won't go well." Minato's heart beat faster at the word "kyudo". "And? Don't get so scared." "What are you doing?" It was a person's voice. The man from earlier was standing right in front of him when he had looked back at the strange phenomenon. That is because there are way too many terms right in this first chapter, and to prevent people from having to scroll up and down I decided to put them right there. Next to them, there was an idol-like boy who attracted gazes, frequently waving at the female manager. Giving a sidelong glance at Seiya, who was looking around with interest, Minato quickly passed through the area. No, more than just winning, his shots were beautiful. Unlike Minato, who chose the neighborhood public high school for financial reasons, Seiya could have chosen the best school in the prefecture or a challenging private school. While feeling something muddled, Minato thought about the new life that would be beginning from now on. The Kazemai High School's entrance ceremony. Cherry blossoms that were making merry early with the arrival of spring. Four years ago, he had been a mischievous puppy, but he grew up kind and smart. His graceful body, fitting for a fifteen-year-old, was wrapped in training clothes, and he advanced along the straight mountain path where snow still remained. Well then, everyone, shall we head for the kyudojo (place where kyudo is performed)?" Minato panicked. All of the groups were shouting, including the girls from the cheerleading squad holding colourful bonbons in red and orange, and the well-built boys holding a cheering banner that read, "Passing is love!" Immediately, there were freshmen who were caught by the soccer club. Suppressing his fast-beating heart, he went past the entryway, heading for the right side of the building. He didn't think that there would be someone drawing a bow in the forest in the evening. Shu practicing kyudo at Kirisaki High School Kyudo at Kirisaki High Sch -Kazemai High School Japanese Archery Club- is the first volume of the Tsurune light novel series, published on December 26, 2016.[1] Summary[] The story follows Minato Narumiya, a boy who used to be in his middle school kyudo club until a certain incident caused him to vow to qus encounter in a forest Minato ultimately decides to overcome his past issues and return to kyudo. I also put numbers next to the Eight Stages of Shooting whenever they come up, since you have to have a good picture of the pose to understand what's going on (thinking of replacing the gif with the still frames.) So, anyways, I hope you enjoy this. Owls have good ears." Doing as he was told, Minato reached out fearfully. It thinks that when I call it, it'll be able to get food. Maybe it really was a ghost. Well, if your situation changes, you can just come by and visit us anytime. It's better than naming a dog "Bear" at least. The owls of the true owl family were as big as the falcons used in falconry. The kai was the term for drawing a bow all the way back to the length that was most suitable for the archer. The shrine was snug in that old way, and there was no sign of people. It looks like a place where ghosts would come out... When he thought that, he was startled from hearing a sound. Like bamboo sprouts shooting up from the earth towards the sky overnight, the sound was carefree and crisp. "At the middle school I went to, I chose kyudo as my compulsory martial arts course. Seiya turned back to look straight at him."I'm going to go ahead to the kyudojo.""I'm not doing kyudo anymore.""I know you're carrying around your treasure." Minato grabbed his bag in spite of himself. Oh, and I did have permission to look after it." Is it my imagination, or does that name seem like it was incredibly easy to come up with? He was a Bernese mountain dog, a mountain dog that originally came from Switzerland. This is because it's sturdy, unlike the poorly built stuff made nowadays. Plus, I might have been influenced by Minato and Seiya.""Are these two experienced in kyudo?""They are. When he caressed his mottled wings, it comfortably closed its large eyes."It's really attached to you.""It's more like it got used to me rather than getting attached. In everyday language, this would be called "drawing back the bow," but the Japanese yumi was a bow which was lifted up and pushed open equally on both sides. The climax was called kai. When he saw the man going towards the target to collect the arrows again, Minato heaved a big sigh. I thought I'd do it seriously when I went to high school. It was a grey wagtail that flew before him as he rode. While he was focused on Fuu, the man opened the accessory drawer. "So, where's the medicine...ah."An unpleasant bang sound rang out, and the contents of the entire drawer flew out. When he peeked forward through the bamboo fence that acted as a partition, he saw the spacious shajo (building where the archers shoot from) illuminated by fluorescent lamps. There was a lone young man there, clad in a white kyudogi (2) and hakama. As expected, it was a different person from the archer he saw back then. Narumiya in particular wanted to do kyudo, and I heard that all of you are close, I come to stand for the white-feathered arrows. He rubbed his sweaty palm against his jacket. When he stroked the feathers on its head, Fuu suddenly shrunk its body, looking like it was withdrawing itself. "It's kind of fluffy." "Owls can fly noiselessly thanks to their soft feathers. Sorry, Fuu." "Food?" "Pink mice. He asks his mother to promise that she will come cheer him on in a competition. After that, he finished collecting the arrows and shot six arrows again, all of them hitting the center. * Book name has existed. If you collapse and miss the entrance ceremony in the morning, that'll be a spectacular high school debut.""Shut up.""Well, at that time, I will offer to nurse you faithfully in our special hospital room.""And I'll politely turn you down. If this was a competition, he had won. Its flapping created a wind. Glancing sideways at Minato, who was standing stock-still, the man addressed the being with a heart-shaped face. "Fuu, you were the one who was more surprised. I don't plan to join any club. It was the moment when bow and archer became one, for a long time until the arrow was released. As this was a small town in the mountains, it wasn't unusual for their high schools to be the same. My mother died, so I have to do most of the housework, and I also have to make dinner for my father...I'm sorry."The white mark on Minato's left flank was the scar of the injury he had sustained when he was involved in a traffic accident with his mother, which happened one month after Seiva got Bear. The judge's area was at the side of the shajo, with tatami flooring spreading as wide as twelve tatami mats, and the floor one level higher. He doubted the efficacy of the ointment, which was considerably aged. While rubbing on the medicine, the exhausted fluorescent lamp flickered. He never paid heed to Minato's watching, nor told him to go home. But you are forbidden from making loud sounds. In the dim light, the new sprouts shone, looking like hands clasped together and dedicating prayers up to the sky. My kyudo teacher praised me, saying that I had 'good muscles'. "Minato hadn't noticed, but I found your name on the class register.""I knew that you were being sworn in as the freshman representative. He had clear eyes, a high nose bridge, a tall stature, and was blessed with a well-balanced body. He stood on tiptoes to survey the three of them, moving his face closer with effort." I have received a certain incognito order. You're still as smart as ever, that's expected. Although he quickly went to the side, the honking was completely unexpected. After riding around aimlessly without deciding on a destination, when it was soon time to go back home, a small yellow bird flew out before his eyes. And here's Seiya! It's been a while. No, it didn't matter if it was a ghost. Please don't disappear. Don't disappear until I get there. While praying that silently in his mind, he passed through the trees, and went around to a corner where outdoor viewing was possible. When he was embraced, his transmitted body temperature felt good. The man placed his bow aside, got into seiza, and took off his yugake, the glove used in kyudo. I didn't recognize you for a moment," Seiya said, then continued. Also my scanner won't work for some reason so get ready for some insert pictures in very bad quality. Now you may notice that some kyudo, and where he translation right next to them in brackets. From somewhere faraway, a crying sound could be heard. After passing through the forest, he arrived at Yata Shrine. This sparks his interest in doing kyudo, and where he first learns the term tsurune (an especially beautiful sound of a bowstring). How about Takehaya-kun and Yamanouchi-kun over here?""I'd certainly like to join the club.""Me too, me too!"Seiya, who was supposed to be right next to him, looked to be far away. Minato wasn't going to do club activities. They were a gang who spent time together like brothers. While standing to pedal up the hill, a car coming from behind honked its horn. After seeing it off, he took out something from his bag." Having a drink after work is the best. I always neglect it until it goes out."" I think your entire house should have LED lighting installed, so you won't have to replace it so much, sir" Indeed. The red-violet buds of the mountain azaleas were stiff, and wearing light brown caps. However, he did not want to meet him during training if possible. Seiya, upon realizing that, spoke with an innocent look on his face. Before he knew it, the pain of his wound faded away. He asked him a question when he saw him jotting something down in a notebook. "How many targets did you hit?""I'm not keeping track of how many I hit or miss. He had long fur with a black, white, and brown luster, and the round, light-brown tufts of fur above his eyes resembled eyebrows. The budding trees were dazzling. The final point of his running route every morning was the neighborhood park. However, four years had passed already. You're pretty smart." Even though he meant for it to sound sarcastic, it didn't seem to have gone through at all. The man went to the edge of the shajo, and shook his arm towards the outdoors. If it were the old him, he wouldn't have done such a lazy thing. A gi is the white uniform martial artists wear, so a kyudogi is the kyudo version of it.3 So this word was originally "穹天" (kyuuten) which seems to be a Chinese word rather than Japanese. Although both sides of the endless paved road. Before he knew it, Minato was in an unfamiliar place. Just a whim, so to speak. "The man narrowed his eyes and smiled his crescent moon smile again. A tsurune that glowed against the deep blue heavens (3). As he placed his feet on the pedals of his bike, the moon was shining above his head. Passing through the judge's area to the back-right corner, they arrived at the waiting room of the dojo. The man placed Fuu on Minato's left shoulder. But leaving that aside, you're bleeding from the back of your left hand.""What?"When he looked, sure enough, blood was welling up. There were few people who could get seriously angry at a puppy that they had become attached to. That nostalgic face caused Minato's tense-looking face to break into a smile. Right, Bear?" Bear made an answer that was unclear as to whether or not it was positive or negative. Seiya's house was an orthopedic clinic, and right behind Minato's house. There was a strange sense of solidarity. Although there was lingering excitement between the three of them, a small man approaching them caused them to break off their conversation. Twelve hits. Someone would change it eventually.""...I'll do it."Returning Fuu from his shoulder to the man, he took the new fluorescent tube and got out the stepladder in the corner of the room. However, suddenly, a large boy placed his arms around their shoulders from behind, and if I drink alcohol, my brain will shrink.""...You are amazing. Then, before his eyes, he gave a friendly smile. "Fuu," he called out, and something cut him. "Come with me to get some medicine for that.""No, um, I...""No way, are you suspicious of me? Haven't you gotten too big? Are you sure to delete? "Aren't you Minato? It was a path made by the denizens of the area coming and going—an animal trail, so to speak. Seiya grabbed Minato's arm, who seemed like he was a cherry tree there, dying the ground beneath in pale pink. Owl in Japanese is "fukurou", so it's like naming an ostrich "Os".2. One got the impression that he was more mature than Minato, and not just because he had already celebrated his sixteenth birthday. A smile appeared on his face, like he was making fun of his companion. "Morning, Minato. Fuu play-bited at the man's long fingers. He then brought his nose close to his left flank, gesturing for him to show it. "Hey, Bear, you're tickling him. I'm not going to charge you extra for the medicine, so don't worry." The man narrowed his eyes and grinned. He followed the man, who seemed like he ruled over the shajo, to there. He stopped his bike before the torii gate, and climbed the stone steps. This forest was called Yata no Mori, where deciduous trees like pin oaks and Mongolian oaks thrived. And Minato, you've gotten cooler and cooler since the last I saw you.""Stop talking like you're an uncle flattering your nephews," Minato said. The whitening scar was the proof of that. Then, why do you keep running every morning...? Minato felt like he had heard Seiva's voice. The surrounding mountains were sprinkled with yellow-green, the mountain in springtime. I didn't expect to meet you guys here again at high school. You can check your email and reset password. He washed his face with water from the water fountain in the corner, then lifted the hem of his T-shirt to wipe it. It was considerably aged, and the wood was corroded and covered in moss. He couldn't believe that it was possible to create that metallic-sounding timbre with a bow. For Narumiya Minato and Takehaya Seiya, today was their entrance ceremony at the same high school.
